

RSA House twins its toilets with Burundi, Eastern Africa.

Toilet Twinning is a new and unique way of supporting people for whom good, clean, safe sanitation is a luxury – not a given.

CORD the international organisation working with refugees and the victims of violent conflict is helping to improve water and sanitation in war torn Burundi. In the past year they've helped local people to build 870 latrines, each benefiting a family of six.

The RSA has been at the forefront of creative thinking for centuries... toilet twinning is just that, an imaginative approach to highlighting a desperate global need.

Shirley Gibson, Facilities Manager at the RSA says 'we had no hesitation in twinning our toilets and are delighted at the world wide support the campaign is receiving. We hope that by displaying the plaque in our public toilets we will encourage clients and visitors to join the campaign.'
