Become part of history

The mission of the RSA (Royal Society for the encouragement of Arts, Manufactures and Commerce) is to enrich society through ideas and action.

We believe that all human beings have creative capacities that, when understood and supported, can be mobilised to deliver a 21st century enlightenment.

We work to bring about the conditions for this change, not just amongst our diverse Fellowship, but also in institutions and communities. By sharing powerful ideas and carrying out cutting-edge research, we build networks and opportunities for people to collaborate - creating fulfilling lives and a flourishing society.

Our story so far

The RSA was founded in 1754 by William Shipley, an English drawing master, social reformer and inventor. He wanted to create a society which he hoped would make Great Britain the centre for intellectual advancements in the areas of arts and sciences.

Historical members include Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Gainsborough, Karl Marx and William Wilberforce, to name but a few. In 1877, RSA fellow Alexander Graham Bell gave the first practical demonstration of his new invention, the telephone, at the RSA.

The RSA has been at the forefront of social change for 260 years and the mission of the RSA today is the same as when founded – to enrich society through ideas and action. At the heart of the RSA is an international community of 27,000 like-minded people, a fellowship with the shared values of creativity, inclusivity and responsibility. The diverse list of fellows now includes such luminaries as Tim Berners-Lee, Stephen Hawking and Jocelyn Bell Burnell.
